Note: There is no current homologation or approval for the REBEL Face Guard 100, as it is a totally new product, and testing agencies such as SABS or ISO (International Standards Organisation) have no current standard against which to test the product. Please note that the usual disposable face masks have no approval either. We do stress however, that the REBEL Face Guard is not designed to protect the wearer – rather it is designed to protect the people or processes that the wearer comes into contact with.

We emphasise that other COVID-19 prevention measures should still be taken, such as social distancing, sanitising etc. Use the Face Guard to ensure that you don't infect people or objects around you during the course of your job, and while you are able to social distance. When you leave your job for the day, and are not able to social distance (e.g. going home by taxi), then protect yourself by wearing a normal face mask.
